I. Background and justification

1. The Executive Board approved the first country cooperation framework (CCF) for El Salvador on 31 July 1997 for the period 1997-1999. The preparation of the CCF, which involved consultations with the Government, United Nations agencies and other donors, took into account the social, economic and political situation and perspectives of the country as well as national policies, plans and programmes, and technical cooperation needs.

2. Current economic, social and political trends indicate that the situation of the country has not improved from that of 1997. In fact, it has worsened in some areas, particularly related to the high levels of violence and criminality that the country is experiencing and the economic, social and environmental effects of Hurricane Mitch that struck Central America in October 1998.

3. The weak economic structure in El Salvador is characterized by low growth rates (3 per cent for the period 1996-1998), and a fragile and unconsolidated macroeconomic stability. The country still faces a huge challenge in terms of human development, which includes high poverty rates (45.1 per cent in 1998), poor access to basic services and failure to generate enough employment opportunities.

4. A new President took office in June 1999. No significant policy shifts in the political, economic or social realm have been introduced to date. The government programme known as La Nueva Alianza (The New Alliance) adopted by the new Administration is comprised of four components: employment, solidarity, security and the future. However, apart from institutional programmes and substantive actions no specific objectives or goals have been clearly stated.

5. In the context of a slowdown of government activities due to the electoral process and the subsequent installation of a new Administration, a substantive dialogue with the new authorities for the country review and the formulation of a new CCF could not be initiated. Moreover, the UNDP office was completely involved in the preparation of the National Plan for Reconstruction and Transformation (Post-Mitch) submitted to the Consultative Group in Sweden in May 1999, which entailed the broad participation of civil society, government institutions and donors.

6. The UNDP country office has agreed with the United Nations agencies present in the country to harmonize programming periods beginning in 2002, since most of them will finalize their current programming period in 2001. It was not possible then to prepare a CCF. The country review will be carried out in the first half of 2000.

7. In view of the above, the Government has requested a two-year extension of the first CCF, from 1 January to 31 December 2001.

II. Objectives

A. Programme areas

8. The national objectives supported by UNDP through the current CCF are related to the following three programme areas: consolidation of democratic governance, poverty eradication among the great majority of the population, and regeneration and protection of the environment. The promotion of gender equality is a cross-cutting issue and has been integrated into the three programme areas; in addition, important initiatives undertaken specifically in this field are described separately below.

1. Democratic governance

9. In the area of democratic governance, UNDP support is aimed at ensuring an effective state of law in accordance with the mandate given by the 1992 Peace Agreement, the responsibilities derived from the peace process, and the reform and modernization of the public sector. This area entails an integral vision that addresses public security, human rights and the administration of justice, within the framework of sustainable human development (SHD). The objectives in this area are reform of the administration of justice, consolidation of public security institutions, strengthening of institutions and instruments that promote and protect human rights, assisting in the design and implementation of public sector modernization policies.

10. Results achieved to date in democratic governance relate to the strengthening of the ombudsman office and the judiciary to improve their administrative capacity and their relationship with civil society. However, policies that permit the consolidation of these institutions have not been adopted. UNDP also provided support to the civil society in order to improve and encourage citizen participation in the elections held during 1997 and 1999. The National Registry for Citizens was created and UNDP also provided support to initiate its activities. The Judiciary Training School was supported to develop curricula and training plans. An evaluation of international technical cooperation was carried out and its recommendations will be taken into account for future projects.

11. For the period 2000-2001, cooperation with the above-mentioned institutions will continue, particularly in the process of designing and setting in place policies that guarantee an efficient public security system, an adequate human rights protection system and mechanisms to monitor its performance. It also includes policies and mechanisms for transparent and efficient procedures in the administration of justice. Finally, support will be provided to curricula reform in the university law faculties to adapt them to the new juridical trends.

12. The programme "Violence in a Society in Transition" is an important initiative that will continue to be implemented during the period 2000-2001. This programme constitutes a response to the alarming levels of violence in El Salvador, which manifest themselves in virtually every realm of life. It seeks to strengthen national capacity to conceptualize and analyse the phenomenon of violence, formulate policies and programmes, promote training of human resources for the treatment and prevention of violence, and support coordination mechanisms among diverse initiatives.

2. Poverty eradication

13. With regard to poverty eradication, UNDP seeks to contribute to local development, creation of opportunities for the poor and social equity. Objectives in this area are the design of anti-poverty policies and plans, improving instruments to plan, monitor and evaluate poverty eradication initiatives, strengthening of mechanisms for local development, and design and implementation of programmes/projects to increase coverage and quality of basic social services.

14. Results achieved in this area are related to different initiatives at the national and local levels to which UNDP has contributed, in partnership with other national and international institutions. Among these initiatives, it is important to mention the local development process supported by UNDP, with a focus on the strengthening of institutional capacity and sustainable development at the local level with a participatory approach, and on promotion of dialogue between the State, CSOs and the private sector. This has resulted in the formulation of the National Strategy for Local Development, recently supported by the President of the country, the creation of the National Council for Sustainable Development and support for the formulation of a law allocating 6 per cent of the national budget to local governments.

15. In addition, UNDP has promoted and contributed to the formulation of a rural development strategy, and the formulation of the National Reconstruction and Transformation Plan (Post-Mitch). National human development reports and poverty studies reflecting human development issues and challenges and linkages between macroeconomic policies and poverty have also been carried out and widely disseminated through public forums. Support has also been provided to the implementation of projects to increase coverage and improve quality in the education sector.

16. The results to be achieved during the extension period relate to the promotion of consensus-building between the State, CSOs and the private sector, and mechanisms for the adoption of the proposals mentioned above. Additionally, a national strategy on poverty is to be prepared, using as important inputs the studies already carried out.

17. Regarding poverty and gender, UNDP is coordinating the formulation by the United Nations Inter-Agency Gender Group (composed of the gender focal points of all United Nations bodies represented in El Salvador) of a project for the empowerment of young women, which will be presented for funding to the United Nations Foundation. Two project proposals by NGOs have been discussed with UNDP and are being presented for funding to the Japanese Fund for Women in Development. One proposal concerns literacy and educational improvement, vocational training and technical assistance for microenterprises of women. The other is for the strengthening of an NGO providing services to microenterprises, especially to promote women's access to these services.

3. Environment

18. With regard to the environment, UNDP supports developing a legal framework to protect the environment, updating and implementing the National Strategy for the Environment, strengthening environmental and water resources management, and institutional strengthening at the local level to promote the regeneration and protection of the environment. It also contributes to compliance with the commitments derived from the International Conventions ratified by El Salvador.

19. The main results in this area have been the promotion of consensus-building for the creation of the Ministry of Environment and Natural Resources, and the formulation of the Law for Environmental Protection and its corresponding rules of procedures. The national strategy on biodiversity and the strategy on climate change have also been formulated and are being implemented with UNDP support. The UNDP country office has succeeded in positioning itself as a close partner of the Ministry of Environment.

20. Results to be achieved during the extension period relate to the establishment of new institutional infrastructure in the Ministry of Environment, for example, and the Office for Climate Change, and structures to broaden participation (CSOs, private sector and academic institutions) in government decision-making in the environmental area. Partnerships with several bilateral and multilateral donors will be enhanced. Donor mapping activities and assistance to the preparation of donors meetings will be supported. Finally, some initiatives such as small grants for community groups and NGOs as well as a tri-national project (El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala) for the Trifinio area are being identified for possible funding from the Global Environment Facility (GEF).

4. Gender

21. Regarding gender equality and the advancement of women, the international commitments made by the Government of El Salvador pursuant to the Platform for Action adopted in Beijing in 1995 has led to important achievements. One of these is the creation in 1996 of the National Institute for the Advancement of Women, the Instituto Salvadoreño para el Desarrollo de la Mujer (ISDEMU), which was established as an autonomous institution whose main role is to elaborate a national policy for the advancement of women and gender equality, monitor and evaluate its implementation and ensure that gender issues are taken into account in public policies in general. ISDEMU started operating in 1997 and with UNDP support elaborated the National Policy for Women with the participation of women's organizations. Among the positive results achieved are broader acceptance of the gender perspective as a cross-cutting issue in public sector institutions, and the establishment in some ministries of gender units or commissions. However, they often lack adequate budgets and trained personnel on gender issues.

22. Additionally, the non-governmental organization (NGO) Las Dignas, through a project financed by UNIFEM and the Government of Luxembourg, has supported the first congress of women elected in municipal councils. They formed an association that represents an important venue for exchange, training and reciprocal strengthening for women municipal leaders, regardless of their party affiliation.

23. For the period 2000-2001, the country office will support various initiatives. Technical assistance and financial support to the project for the collection and analysis of statistics with ISDEMU, which started in 1999, will continue. The final objective is to set up a system of indicators that monitor the advancements achieved under the National Policy for Women. UNDP with the Inter-American Development Bank will promote workshops with government institutions and civil society organizations (CSOs), especially women's organizations, to discuss the new National Policy for Women 2000-2004.

B. Action to be taken

24. The country review will take place during the first half of 2000, in order to analyse the progress of the CCF and adjust to new priorities, some of which have already been included as part of the programming initiatives. Among these are the "Violence in a Society in Transition" and the National Plan for Reconstruction and Transformation (Post-Mitch). The review will involve government institutions, project/programme personnel, CSOs, United Nations agencies, bilateral donors and international financial institutions.

25. The common country assessment (CCA) and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF) exercises are also to be carried out jointly with United Nations agencies in 2000. Together with the country review, these will provide the necessary inputs for the formulation of the new CCF in 2001.

C. CCF extension and harmonization of programming periods

26. Agreement has been reached with the United Nations agencies to harmonize programming periods beginning in 2002, since most of them (UNICEF, UNFPA, FAO, WHO/PAHO) will end their programming period in 2001. With regard to the WFP, its Executive Board has approved the country programme from 1998 to 2002. However, there is a gradual phasing out, with WFP withdrawing from some Departments and the Government taking over in these regions. WFP is withdrawing from development projects but will be ready to support any emergency initiative even after 2002.

27. Inter-agency thematic discussions, coordination and implementation of joint initiatives on gender, human rights and emergency relief, among others, have resulted in the adoption of a common position regarding the cooperation to be provided on these themes. The CCF extension period will enable UNDP to enhance substantive dialogue and joint implementation of other initiatives with the United Nations agencies, which will constitute important experiences and inputs that will greatly contribute to achieving full harmonization of programming periods in the year 2002.

III. Recommendation

28. The Administrator recommends that the Executive Board approve the extension of the first Country Cooperation Framework for El Salvador for a period of two years from 1 January 2000 through 31 December 2001.
