Summary

The present report is submitted in compliance with the request of the General Assembly in paragraph 102 of its resolution 59/250, in which the Assembly invited the Economic and Social Council to evaluate the implementation of the resolution.

In the course of 2005, key provisions of resolution 59/250 received additional impetus for implementation with the World Summit as well as, for example, the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness. The present report highlights actions taken by the United Nations development system to pursue the reform of its functioning, ensuring national ownership over the assistance it provides to developing countries, making national capacity development a central goal of its development cooperation, fostering an inclusive approach in inter-agency collaboration to facilitate access by developing countries to the expertise and services available within the system, to reduce administrative and procedural burden on United Nations organizations and national partners. The United Nations system is expected to play a significant role in the implementation of the internationally agreed development goals and to demonstrate its value by its positive impact on the development process of recipient countries. The biennial Development Cooperation Forum organized by the Economic and Social Council will be an opportunity to strengthen the commitment of the international community to support coherent and sustainable development policies.
The Council is invited to prepare the ground for the next triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system, which the Assembly will conduct in 2007, and to provide guidance thereon to the Secretary-General in preparing for the triennial comprehensive policy review.

I. Introduction

1. As requested by the General Assembly in paragraph 102 of its resolution 59/250, the Economic and Social Council, during the operational activities segment of its substantive session of 2006, will examine the operational activities of the United Nations system in order to evaluate the implementation of Assembly resolution 59/250 with a view to ensuring its full implementation. In that context, the present report on the progress of implementation of resolution 59/250 by the United Nations system has been prepared to assist the Council in fulfilling its main responsibility in the area of development cooperation, which is to improve the quality and impact of the operational activities of the United Nations.

2. The present progress report follows the report on the management process developed by the United Nations system for implementing resolution 59/250 submitted to the Council in 2005 (E/2005/58). In paragraphs 3 and 4 of its resolution 2005/7, the Council requested that the present report include an update of the matrix of targets, benchmarks and time frames contained in the report on the management process, with analytical reporting on results and outcomes achieved through the implementation of actions by the United Nations system. The Council, in particular, expected that the present update reflects entirely provisions of Assembly resolution 59/250 on national capacity-building, on increasing system-wide capacity in support of recipient countries and enabling and facilitating their access to the full range of services and accumulated experience available throughout the entire United Nations system.

3. General Assembly resolutions on the triennial comprehensive policy review of operational activities for development of the United Nations system, as far back as 1989, have addressed the importance of capacity-building and identified ways to better achieve national ownership, including through national execution and for the system to provide the skills and expertise that correspond to the needs and requirements of developing countries, within their respective development frameworks. Those ways and means to support national development process were restated in strong terms in Assembly resolution 59/250, making key priorities for United Nations reform the full utilization of national capacities and the greater coherence of the United Nations system response to national priorities.

4. The fundamental orientations of resolution 59/250 appeared prominently in such documents as the 2005 World Summit Outcome. They also appear in the 2005 Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness. The commitments of the Paris Declaration are to adhere to the goals of ownership, harmonization, alignment, results and mutual accountability. The view that national ownership leads to greater impact on the development process is central to the three policy documents, as well as the need to manage by results and to obtain development results. The need to make external aid commitments more predictable, highlighted in the Paris Declaration, is parallel to the call, in the General Assembly resolutions for the triennial comprehensive policy review, for predictability of adequate funding for the development cooperation activities of the United Nations system. The 2005 World Summit reaffirmed that the role of national policies and development strategies cannot be overemphasized, recognizing that national efforts should be complemented by supportive global programmes, measures and policies. The Summit underscored the need for strengthening linkages between the normative work of the United Nations system and its operational activities and for implementing current reforms aimed at a better-performing United Nations country presence. In the follow-up to the 2005 World Summit, initiatives are being launched relevant to the issues addressed in resolution 59/250, such as the High-Level Panel on United Nations System-wide Coherence, established in early 2006. Therefore, the efforts of the United Nations system to implement resolution 59/250 take place in a favourable policy context.

5. In 2007, a comprehensive analysis of implementation of resolution 59/250 will be submitted to the Assembly at its sixty-second session, through the Council, in the context of the triennial comprehensive policy review. The assessment of progress of implementation of Assembly resolution 59/250 by the Council, in 2006, presents an opportunity to Member States to offer additional guidance to the United Nations system to ensure full implementation of the resolution and assist the Secretariat in undertaking, for 2007, its analysis of implementation which should focus on the issues of greatest interest to them.

6. The present progress report is the outcome of a comprehensive consultation process with the organizations of the United Nations system and its inter-agency mechanisms. Information on action taken by the United Nations system to implement Assembly resolution 59/250 is presented in section III of the present report. Section II below offers a brief analytical summary of the main thrust of progress accomplished in implementation, in relation to the general orientations of the resolution, expressing the consensus of Member States on the development cooperation role of the United Nations system, and which were identified in the 2005 management process report as follows:

(a) Integrating the activities of the United Nations system with national plans and priorities: national ownership and participation;
(b) Partnership and support to national capacity-building;
(c) Capacity of the United Nations system to contribute to development results;
(d) United Nations reform process.

Recommendation

Guidelines for the next triennial comprehensive policy review: The Economic and Social Council may wish to use the assessment of progress achieved in the implementation of General Assembly resolution 59/250 in the year 2006 to lay down broad guidelines for the 2007 triennial comprehensive policy review, emphasizing areas on which the report on the triennial comprehensive policy review should focus.

II. Overview of progress in the implementation of resolution 59/250

A. Integrating the activities of the United Nations system with national plans and priorities: national ownership and participation

7. To ensure greater national ownership over the assistance provided by the United Nations system, the management process for the implementation of resolution 59/250 identified the following key actions for immediate progress:
(a) Enhancing the coherence of the system at the country level with tools such as the common country assessment (CCA) and the United Nations Development Assistance Framework (UNDAF); (b) ensuring national authorities ownership of the UNDAF and their full participation in its preparation and development; (c) ensuring that the programming and monitoring of United Nations multi-year programmes are fully aligned with the UNDAF and move towards harmonization of programming cycles with the national instruments.

8. In its resolution 59/250 the General Assembly recognized the merit of past efforts to enhance the coherence of the system at the country level. Programmatic coherence was pursued through the promotion of internationally agreed development goals and the use of CCA and UNDAF. Also, coherence reduces duplication and transaction costs, facilitating national ownership of United Nations processes. Based on experience, UNDG agreed that CCA should be short and flexible and is not needed where relevant issues are covered in national processes. In 2004, 17 CCAs and UNDAFs were prepared, of which 12 fed into national development processes.

9. Subsequent to the adoption of resolution 59/250, an increasing number of United Nations country teams have helped national partners to place the Millennium Development Goals within their Poverty Reduction Strategies, linking CCA and UNDAF to those strategies. In July 2005, UNDG adopted a set of measures to put national development plans at the centre of United Nations country programming; strengthen national capacities; and increasingly use and strengthen national systems. Those measures focused on key challenges concerning, for example, the role of the United Nations system vis-à-vis new aid modalities and the provision of optimal support to recipient countries to realize the commitments of the Millennium Declaration. A first survey of implementation of the measures is currently being reviewed by UNDG. In this context, it is recalled that the 2005 World Summit Outcome document requested the adoption and implementation, by 2006, of comprehensive national development strategies to achieve the internationally agreed development goals.

10. Regarding the alignment of multi-year programmes with UNDAF, at the end of 2005, in 83 countries, UNDAFs had been completed with harmonized programme cycles. The 2004 guidelines for CCA and UNDAF have provided United Nations country teams with flexibility to adjust the UNDAF cycle so that the duration and timing of the United Nations programming process could be synchronized with the national planning cycle. Progress in that area has been reinforced by the proposal for further harmonization of country programming approval presented to the Joint Executive Board meeting of UNDP/UNFPA, UNICEF and WFP in March 2006.

11. As mentioned in paragraph 4 above, initiatives are being taken to strengthen system-wide coherence, in particular by strengthening country-level coordination systems, as well as strengthening the linkages between the normative work and the operational activities of the United Nations system and by managing more tightly entities in the field of development, humanitarian assistance and the environment. Early decisions that the General Assembly may take on these matters should be adequately reflected in the preparation for the triennial comprehensive policy review 2007.
Recommendation

Follow-up to the 2005 World Summit Outcome: The Economic and Social Council may wish to request the Secretary-General, in assessing the implementation of Assembly resolution 59/250 in preparation for the next triennial comprehensive policy review, to take account of the relevant intergovernmental decisions made in the context of the follow-up to the 2005 World Summit Outcome.

B. Partnership and support to national capacity-building

12. Strengthening national ownership and participation and building national capacity for development are two mutually reinforcing activities. In paragraph 26 of resolution 59/250 the General Assembly emphasized that capacity development and full national ownership of development strategies are essential for the achievement of the Millennium Development Goals.

13. In 2002, UNDP and the Department of Economic and Social Affairs cooperated in achieving a consensus among United Nations organizations on the definition and importance of mainstreaming capacity development in all programmes. Since then, a number of United Nations programmes have explicitly identified capacity development as a main goal. Following the adoption of resolution 59/250 and the Paris Declaration on Aid Effectiveness, attention is going beyond the development of capacity needed to manage and implement United Nations-supported programmes to address the strengthening of country capacities to manage and implement the national development process.

14. In that respect, in resolution 59/250 the General Assembly called upon United Nations organizations to strengthen the capacity of developing countries to better utilize various aid modalities, including system-wide approaches and budget support that poses challenges to United Nations development cooperation, the way it is programmed and funded. In early 2005, UNDG issued a position paper on sector support and sector programmes, based on country-level experiences. By mid-2006, UNDG would approve operational guidelines on sector support.

15. In resolution 59/250 the General Assembly also stressed that measures for institutional and capacity-building, supportive of development be taken from the beginning of the relief phase of humanitarian assistance. Some United Nations country teams have supported government coordination for planning and tracking progress on overall support to transition from recovery to development. OCHA and UNDG member organizations are developing a joint programme for coordination in the transition phase. Building local capacity during the relief phase is the concern of many agencies; however, the emergencies of 2005 have revealed that significant local capacity is often untapped. The United Nations Emergency Relief Coordinator is working closely with Governments and partner agencies to improve the situation. The newly established Peacebuilding Commission is expected to ensure predictable financing for recovery.

16. A variety of approaches to support capacity development include facilitating technology transfer, promoting South-South cooperation and ensuring progress on cross-cutting issues such as gender equality. The UNDG working group on capacity development is developing operational guidance to United Nations country teams on increasing effectiveness of their support to national capacity development. In paragraph 29 of resolution 59/250 the General Assembly requested CEB to analyse the wide range of capacity development efforts of the United Nations development system and to make recommendations on measures necessary to enhance their effectiveness. The High-level Committee on Programmes of CEB decided that that analysis should maximize experience in that domain by each organization of the system and include analysis of the development of national technical and technological capacities.

Recommendations

Support to national capacity development: The Economic and Social Council may wish (a) to stress that support of the United Nations system to national capacity development be designed with the aim of strengthening national ownership and leadership over external assistance and aid coordination, in particular in the context of new aid modalities such as sector-wide approaches and general budget support; (b) to call for more systematic United Nations capacity development efforts to support national development strategies that benefit from the results of the system normative work.

C. Capacity of the United Nations system to contribute to development results

17. The internationally agreed development goals underscore the necessity of increased support at the country level for the formulation of comprehensive development plans, based on an integrated approach to development. In that respect, the complementary mandates and capacities of the United Nations organizations are one of the strengths of the system. The 2005 World Summit Outcome document recognized that the United Nations brings together a unique wealth of expertise and resources on global issues and supported stronger system-wide coherence. The efforts to foster teamwork among the organizations of the system are recognized; however, their participation in country-level activities and coordination mechanisms still differs in level and quality, and for some organizations it is inadequate. Developing countries should be able to draw fully on the system’s accumulated experience in all pertinent economic, social and other domains, with contributions by organizations with no country representation or limited country-level presence.

18. Most United Nations organizations are represented in less than half of countries’ United Nations country teams, or are not represented at all; only two organizations, UNDP and UNICEF, are represented in all or most United Nations country teams. Therefore, one important function of Resident Coordinators’ Offices, in addition to support to United Nations country teams, has been to facilitate the participation of non-resident agencies in country processes. In some countries, project staff of those agencies have been designated to represent them and invited to participate in meetings of United Nations country teams. They have also been offered office space in the Resident Coordinators’ Offices or the UNDP offices so that they can be more involved in the activities of the United Nations country teams. Agencies’ regional representatives have participated in key United Nations country teams processes. A wide range of tools and mechanisms are currently used to promote the participation of non-resident agencies in country development work. However, frequently, the communications flow between non-resident and resident agencies is not institutionalized or timely. The insufficient capacity of non-resident agencies to respond to many requests they receive to participate in country-level work, as well as insufficient staffing of Resident Coordinators’ Offices to maintain regular coordination with them, are main constraints to overcome. Proposals to strengthen the participation of non-resident agencies in country-level planning and support that were developed on the basis of the consultation have been considered by the UNDG Programme Group and should be taken up by the High-level Committee on Programmes of CEB later in 2006.

19. The World Summit Outcome added momentum to those efforts to build a more unified United Nations and provide more sustained and integrated support to achieving agreed development goals. The members of the Executive Committee for Economic and Social Affairs are organizing their policy development and analytical work around a few strategic objectives and will strengthen linkages with the operational work of the United Nations system through close collaboration with UNDG and its Executive Committee. In that connection, the relevance of the work of the regional commissions and many non-resident agencies to support country processes lies largely in the results of their recent analytical and normative work, which should be accessed more easily. That requires progress in knowledge management practices and facilities. The High-level Committee on Programmes of CEB decided in 2005 to pursue the issue and to establish a Knowledge Management Task Force.

20. The participation of non-resident agencies in country-level work is an issue that also requires further discussion of the funding situation affecting the capacity of the United Nations development system to provide coherent support to long-term development goals. The financing for operational activities of the system was discussed by the Economic and Social Council and the General Assembly in 2005 and will be examined again by the Council in 2006.9

Recommendation

Capacity of the United Nations system to support comprehensive development strategies: The Economic and Social Council may wish to reiterate that a more inclusive participation of United Nations organizations in country-level processes should facilitate access by developing countries to the expertise and services available within the system. The Council may wish to call for the strengthening of such arrangements as system-wide knowledge management and the strengthening of capacities of the resident coordinator offices and organizations with limited or no country representation to facilitate their participation in country-level development work, increasing the awareness by countries of available expertise and services as well as communicating to the organizations the strategic opportunities for participation.

D. United Nations reform process

21. In resolution 59/250 the General Assembly confirmed that the United Nations development system reform under way should be vigorously pursued with the active involvement of the entire system across the many different areas of action of reform to enhance the contribution to development of the system as a whole as well as secure the most efficient use of limited resources.
22. Harmonization measures should be associated with tangible achievements in terms of actual simplification of processes and a significant reduction in the administrative and procedural burden on their organizations and their national partners brought about in the preparation and implementation of operational activities. The United Nations funds and programmes are currently discussing with their Executive Boards the simplification of their country programming arrangements. Integration with national plans and processes of United Nations tools such as CCA and UNDAF, including the harmonization of programming cycles with national programming, is fundamental to pursue overall simplification.

23. The harmonization and simplification of relevant rules and procedures throughout the United Nations system are critical to rationalize the country presence of United Nations organizations. Harmonization promotes shared management of resources at the country level (shared premises, services, information technology and human resources) as well as coherent decision-making and streamlined management of activities. The model joint office presents the most integrated and efficient use of resources. The first pilot joint office in Cape Verde has been implemented and additional pilots are being developed to have a range of models appropriate to different country situations. Other models include various hosting arrangements pursued by UNDG.

24. Regarding financial policies and practices, the differing cost recovery rates and methods used in the United Nations system are causing unnecessary confusion among stakeholders and delays in the development of joint programmes as well as problems in the participation of United Nations organizations in multi-donor trust funds. A review of cost recovery rates and policies among United Nations organizations has been carried out by the High-level Committee on Management of CEB. Definitions and principles of cost recovery have been harmonized among the Executive Committee agencies; at this time, progress on the matter requires discussions with their Executive Boards, which UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF plan to have in 2006.

25. Joint initiatives are encouraged. In 2004, the UNDGO issued further guidance on joint programming to address administrative and procedural barriers to such approaches. In early 2006, more than 160 joint programmes were reported, of which a quarter were developed in 2005. However, key system-wide measures which the Assembly requested in resolution 59/250 to support the Resident Coordinator system have not yet been adopted: proposals for the Resident Coordinator accountability framework as well as enhanced funding to support the Resident Coordinators are under consideration.

26. Continuous review of progress of reform is crucial to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the United Nations development system. United Nations country teams are conducting common annual reviews of progress towards the expected results defined in the UNDAF results matrix, prior to planning for the subsequent year. Joint evaluations of total United Nations system contributions to development at the country level are planned by a number of United Nations evaluation offices, members of the United Nations Evaluation Group. In 2006 CEB will adopt a policy to support strengthening of evaluation activities, with focus on development results, as encouraged by the Assembly in resolution 59/250.
Recommendation

Simplification and development results: The Economic and Social Council may wish to reiterate that the main goal of the reform of the United Nations development system and its functioning at the country level is to reduce the administrative and procedural burden involved in the design and delivery of development assistance on the organizations of the system and recipient countries, to obtain optimal impact of such assistance on the development process of countries.

III. Progress of implementation of resolution 59/250: matrix of steps taken and results of specific actions against benchmarks and targets at the system-wide level

27. The present section adopts the same structure as Assembly resolution 59/250, following the provisions contained in each of the 12 sections of that resolution. To facilitate comparison with the 2005 report on the management process, the present progress report reproduces the matrix of actions, benchmarks and targets contained in the management process report, inserting in italics at the end of each section or subsection the new information available in early 2006 on the steps taken by the United Nations system to implement resolution 59/250 and results and/or progress to date.

Steps taken; results/progress to date:

See also other sections for relevant items.

[A.a.1] UNDP is preparing a “How-to Guide to MDG-based National Development Strategies” to strengthen capacities for government leadership in the development process (part I) and to provide practical approaches to national partners expertise in achieving the MDGs (modules of part II). The “How-to Guide” draws from experiences of UNCTs in aligning PRS with MDGs.

[A.a.2] The UNDG Action Plan (2006-2008) on Follow-up to the 2005 World Summit is for: (1) Scaling up actions to achieve the MDGs; (2) Sustaining progress achieved; and (3) Mitigating risks to prevent erosion of gains.

An UNDG Policy Network of experts from United Nations agencies was organized in July 2005 for substantive policy and operational advice to UNCTs to support Governments’ preparation/revision of MDG-based strategies on: needs assessment/investment planning, widening policy options, and capacity development. In 2006, the Network (110 Professionals from 15 United Nations agencies) will assist 10-12 UNCTs in priority countries and provide electronic support to others.

Agency initiatives related to support for MDGs, PRS and national priorities include: WFP creation of a Policy Unit to support country offices; FAO support to food security; UNIDO Integrated Programmes in Africa for platform on capacity-building.

[A.a.3] The UNDG Action Plan on implementing the Paris Declaration, approved by UNDG in July 2005 and submitted to the Economic and Social Council, is to: put national development plans at the centre of United Nations country programming; strengthen national capacities; and increase use of, and strengthen, national systems. The UNDG Chair issued a letter to resident coordinators in July 2005 to implement the Plan. A progress report on implementation of the Plan is reviewed by UNDG.

[A.a.4] In follow-up to CEB report “One United Nations” and the 2005 World Summit Outcome, HLCP identified future work priority themes, inter alia: employment, sustainable development, science and technology, migration, rural development, disaster reduction, democracy. The Executive Committee for Economic and Social Affairs has developed workplan clusters as follow-up actions to the 2005 Summit along similar themes.

[A.b.1] [A.b.2] Regarding alignment with national frameworks, strengthening national ownership and leadership, the letter of UNDG Chair to Resident Coordinators (see A.a.3 above) provides guidance:

- To use CCAs to promote country-led analytical work and avoid them where national processes can cover issues of concern to the United Nations and international community;
- To develop UNDAF along national development strategy or priorities, with outcomes, where feasible, drawn directly from the national plan or government/international partners agreed joint strategy;
- To support capacity development of national systems, with transition plans to use them; UNDG members agreed to amend regulations inhibiting use of national systems by end-2006.

12 of 17 CCAs and UNDAFs prepared in 2005 by UNCTs fed into national development processes.

[A.b.3] The Common Programming Manual will incorporate guidelines on national ownership and leadership

[A.b.4] UNDG Programme Group approved in October 2005 proposal by its Task Force on Civil Society to create CSO focal point in UNCTs, with fund-raising for strengthening CSO engagement with United Nations system; guidance will be issued by June 2006.

[A.c.1] UNDG priorities for 2006 reflect the agenda for simplification, harmonization and alignment responding to the 2005 World Summit Outcome with: programme coherence and oversight at country level through common management, programming and monitoring framework; strengthened resident coordinator/humanitarian coordinator system; streamlined United Nations system country presence and further harmonization and simplification.

Further simplification of the common country programming presented at the Joint Meeting of Executive Boards of UNDP/UNFPA, UNICEF and WFP in January 2006. A joint paper on the matter, with instruments, guidance and support, will be submitted to the June 2006 Joint Executive Boards session.

[A.c.2] The UNDG Programme Group and the Bretton Woods institutions met in March 2005 sharing the experiences of the United Nations system with PRSPs. Examples of harmonizing strategic frameworks: Economic Commission for Europe-Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific strengthened cooperation in Central Asia with Central Asian Regional Economic Cooperation led by ADB; in Cambodia, the United Nations/system joined the World Bank, the ADB and DfID in joint analysis to inform each organization’s assistance framework.

[A.c.3] UNDG 2005 position paper on UNCT’s role in sector support and sector programmes: operational implications will be included in the common country programming manual (see A.b.3).

[A.c.4] CEB/HLCP Chair was invited to attend UNDG Executive Committee meetings, while Chairs of the UNDG Programme Group and Management Group and the Development Group Director attend the HLCP and HLCM meetings. UNDG 2006 work priorities, which include improved coherence of coordination mechanisms, were presented to the HLCP at HLCP/HLCM work planning process. Feedback and coordination among UNDG, IASC, HLCM, HLCP and Executive Committee for Economic and Social Affairs worked out by respective secretariats.
[A.c.5] UNDG organized a Working Group on Non-resident Agencies in July 2005 to recommend measures to enhance participation of those agencies in country programming processes. The Working Group submitted to the UNDG Programme Group a report on current practices for NRAs participation in development work at the country level and developing country access to the expertise of non-resident agencies, identified obstacles to participation and new tools and mechanisms to address obstacles; report will be shared with CEB/HLCP.

(a) Overall funding for United Nations development cooperation and core resources
- Supporting United Nations development cooperation with adequate resource base (especially core resources) is crucial (paras. 16 and 17)
- Increasing the financial contributions to the United Nations development system is key to achieving goals emerging from Millennium Declaration and other international summits and conferences (para. 14)
- Funding should focus on long-term development challenges and requirements (para. 15)

(a) To secure, on a predictable, continuous and sustained basis, the critical mass of resources required to ensure adequate functioning and pursuit of long-term development objectives of the United Nations system at the country level (paras. 13 and 21)
- Donor countries and other countries in a position to do so should substantially increase contributions to the core/regular budgets of United Nations development system, whenever possible on a multi-year basis (para. 18), while developing countries should effectively use ODA (para. 19)
- The Economic and Social Council operational activities segment should play an oversight role on funding for the United Nations system’s development cooperation and development cooperation in general (para. 23)

(a) Establishment, starting from 2006, of a 3-year review of trends and perspectives in funding for development cooperation as a whole (not only United Nations development cooperation) by Economic and Social Council (para. 23) [B.a.1]
- Governing bodies of all United Nations organizations, and particularly executive boards of United Nations funds and programmes, will regularly monitor funding situation, including this item in their agenda and their annual reports (para. 21) [B.a.2]
- The Economic and Social Council 3-year review of funding for development cooperation starts in 2006 [B.a.1]
- Regular oversight function on funding issues will be summarized in annual reports of governing bodies [B.a.2]

(a) • Most provisions of this section address donor countries or other countries in position of providing substantial contribution to the operational activities for development of the United Nations system
- A few provisions are addressed to the intergovernmental machinery: Economic and Social Council and governing bodies of United Nations organizations, including executive boards of the United Nations funds and programmes, as well as governing bodies of other agencies and entities of the United Nations system

[B.a.1] First Economic and Social Council review of trends and perspectives on funding for development cooperation in 2006; the Development Cooperation Forum, when established, will also discuss the topic.

[B.a.2] UNDP, UNFPA, UNICEF have adopted 4-year Multi-Year Funding Frameworks since 2000; WFP continues to work on a biennial basis, with a 3-year cycle for indicative donor pledges; IFAD Governing Council financial review is based on 3-year funding replenishments; many agencies are on a biennial cycle (UNCTAD, UNEP, WHO); UNEP reports on its funding situation biannually to its Governing Council and quarterly to its Committee of Permanent Representatives.

WFP membership approved reaching in the next biennium 30 per cent of contributions for development cooperation and transition activities provided multilaterally without restrictions preferably in cash.

United Nations organizations normally submit analytical reports on their funding situation for operational activities, including core and non-core resources, for review by their governing bodies at regular annual sessions.

Funding of country-level coordination mechanisms is not included in agency funding reports. Most agencies contribute in kind.

New formats for United Nations system country programme now include breakdown of programme resources into core and non-core.

[C.a.1.1] See A.a.3/A.b.1 above for 2005 letter from UNDG Chair to RCs on strengthening national capacities and ownership.

The UNDG Working Group on Capacity Development was established in July 2005. Consultations were undertaken to identify tools used by UNCTs and needs for support in capacity assessment and development. The Working Group will produce operational guidance to UNCTs on increasing effectiveness in that respect. A UNDG draft framework for United Nations role in national capacity development presented to Joint Meeting of Boards, January 2006.

[C.a.1.2] No specific system-wide operational policy presented to the Joint Executive Boards of UNDP/UNICEF/UNFPA and WFP in January 2006. UNFPA designated capacity development as one of the four cross-cutting strategies of the Multi-year Funding Framework. No measures are addressing sustainability in capacity development; use of national execution, national expertise and technologies in implementing modalities not specifically reported on regular basis.

FAO converted international Professional posts to national category and used IT to increase national expertise use in developing FAO centres of excellence and knowledge.

UNEP’s Governing Council adopted in February 2005 the Bali Strategic Plan for Technology Support and Capacity Development.

[C.b.1] A system-wide approach is needed for access to technology and technology transfer, aside from South-South cooperation. HLCP/CEB initiated discussions in 2006 on science and technology and inter-agency collaboration for capacity-building.

The Special Unit for South-South Cooperation provides Internet-based knowledge resources; UNDP has included South-South cooperation as one of the six “drivers of development effectiveness”; UNCTAD supports STDev, an online electronic gateway to information on science and technology for development; UNIDO develops global networks, subcontracting partnership exchanges which facilitate South-South and East-South technology transfer, including triangular cooperation.

In follow-up to the World Summit on the Information Society, the United Nations, ITU, UNDP and UNESCO prepared a framework addressing coordination at the country level with the RC system, the CCAs and UNDAPs and thematic groups. The United Nations ICT Task Force promotes the use of ICT for human resource development and capacity-building, and supports application of ICT under the Secretary-General’s initiative to combat HIV/AIDS and other infectious and communicable diseases, working with WHO, UNAIDS and UNDP, maintaining collaborative Internet-based links to official and private initiatives/organizations.

The UNCTAD global partnership on capacity-building on free and open-source software (FOSS) provides training to enable developing countries to achieve wider and more efficient ICT use, particularly in commercial and government activities. UNIDO utilizes ICT to enable information to foster international cooperation and ICT solutions for partnership development at all levels, public and private. UNIDO also provides support to technology transfer and national capacity development in the context of multilateral environmental agreements.

[D.a.1.1] Cost comparisons were made in selected countries to estimate savings on operations with common services.

[D.a.1.2] Recommendations on further simplification, including consolidation of programming instruments into one format presented to the joint meeting of Executive Boards in January 2006. A jointly elaborated paper on next steps prepared in advance of June 2006 Executive Boards.

Specific measures:

Joint Office: One pilot Joint Office (Cape Verde) implemented; additional pilots under development.

Common Premises: Due to security, financial and other considerations, there were no new United Nations Houses established in 2005 (total United Nations Houses now 60). A large number of proposals are for new construction projects with longer planning horizons. Common subnational offices were established and more co-locations are planned for 2006, with cost-benefit analysis to consider for agencies hosted by line ministries.

Common Service (CS): In 2005, a web CS management system, which will allow gathering more information on improved operational efficiency, was launched for country teams; missions are organized on CS support.

The southern Africa Regional Directors Team, from UNDP, UNICEF, UNFPA and WFP, with the participation of OCHA, UNAIDS and FAO, was established to support southern African countries regarding the “Triple Threat” of HIV/AIDS, food insecurity, and weak governance. A UNDG CS Adviser assisted with establishing the first inter-agency Regional Operations Management Team for collaborative and consistent support for common services and premises. A regional Programme Support Group chaired by UNICEF, was established in August 2005 to advise the Regional Directors Team on programming support to UNCTs.

Common ICT platform: The UNDG ICT Working Group accomplished the following ICT services and harmonization of ICT platform:

1. Finalized a report on the harmonization of ICT standards, hardware and packaged software in field offices across agencies, to be shared with agencies for implementation.

2. Established a unified domain name to be implemented in support of Joint Offices and agreed on hardware and software standards for the Joint Offices.

Alignment of regional structures: Discussions ongoing on this issue.

Cost recovery: Cost-recovery rates and policies reviewed by the HLCM; cost-recovery definitions and principles harmonized among Executive Committee agencies; work in UNDG towards a common cost-recovery rate or scale is ongoing; in 2005, the UNDG Working Group on Financial Policies reviewed Executive Committee agencies’ flexibility in adopting cost-recovery rate/scale for multi-donor trust funds and Joint Programmes; UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF will address these issues with their Boards in 2006.

[D.a.2] Joint reporting: UNDG Executive Committee agencies discussed further proposals for simplification and harmonization at Joint Executive Boards meeting (January 2006).

[E.1b] In accordance with the 2005 World Summit Outcome, a high-level panel to study United Nations system coherence was constituted.

[E.1b.1] See section A.a above. UNIDO and UN-Habitat agreed with UNDP on hosting arrangements in pilot countries for national focal point. UN-Habitat with its Governing Council support recruited 35 national officers, placed under the Resident Coordinator and UN-Habitat Regional Offices guidance. UNIDO-UNDP Cooperation Agreement established UNIDO desks within the premises of UNDP (13 country desks in 2005, more are planned).

Project staff of NRAs represent their agencies and participate in UNCT meetings. In certain cases, office space in the Resident Coordinator office or UNDP was provided to them to increase the involvement of Non-Resident Agencies in United Nations country team activities. Their regional representatives have participated in key United Nations country team processes. Not all opportunities led to Non-Resident Agencies involvement owing to such factors as lack of institutionalized communications or of capacity in some of Non-Resident Agencies to respond to multiple requests (see also section F below).

[E.1b.2] CCA is an important instrument but some United Nations country teams exercise flexibility by using other analytical instruments (PRS, national and sectoral development analyses) which provide high-quality situational analyses.

[E.1b.3] Different programming instruments are being consolidated into one document, encouraging inter-agency joint programming.

[E.1b.4] Reviews of UNDAFs by UNCTs will start in 2006 (using UNDG guidelines for annual review of UNDAFs and evaluation).

UNEG is launching independent evaluations of UN system contributions to development at country-level (UNDAF being a component).

As of end of 2005, 53 countries were using harmonized programming tools. At the end of 2006, it is expected that 93 countries will be using the harmonized tools, and 111 countries by 2008.

[E.1c.1] See also section F. Example of agency measures: FAO is funding participation in CCA/UNDAF and delegated new project approval authority to representatives; other measures under consideration.

To better respond to national priorities and planning cycles, 7 UNCTs in Latin America postponed elaboration of CCA and UNDAF in 2005 to 2006.

[E.1c.3] UNDG 2004 Revised Guidance Note on joint programming addressed administrative and procedural barriers. Modalities for Multi-donor Trust Fund, especially for countries in transition, are refined to facilitate joint programming. UNDG Framework and Guide to Cash Transfer Mechanisms were issued in April and September 2005, respectively.
Report on joint programming and joint programmes experiences (by UNDP, UNFPA and UNICEF since 2004) presented to Executive Boards in March 2006. As of February 2006 more than 160 joint programmes reported to UNDG; of those, more than 73 joint programmes were developed in 2004 and more than 116 were developed in 2005; parallel funding, followed by pooled funding, are the most common funding modalities used in joint programmes.

[E.1d.1] In close cooperation with the World Bank and the Millennium Project, UNDG finalized in 2004 a web-based Training Toolkit for MDGs, piloted in five countries, to support national capacities to achieve MDGs.

Following the joint World Bank/UNDG memo on MDGs and PRSPs (May 2003), which clarifies links between the MDGs and PRSPs and the role of UNCTs in PRSP, an increasing number of UNCTs are helping national partners to link MDGs, PRSPs, CCAs and UNDAFs (see A.c.2 above).

[H.a.1] UNCTs sought a more systematic approach to subregional and regional issues relevant to the United Nations. In Africa, NEPAD is a reference for inter-country cooperation among UNCTs and ECA. In 2004, Executive Committee agencies initiated a Regional Directors Team in South Africa (see D.a.1.2, above). ESCAP articulated links to CCA/UNDAFs for selecting areas of technical cooperation. In Latin America and the Caribbean, the UNDG Regional Directors, in September 2005, requested Resident Coordinators to involve ECLAC in preparing CCAs and UNDAFs. In Europe, ECE is actively cooperating with RCs and with the UNDP regional centre in Bratislava in capacity-building activities. See also section (b), below.

[H.b.1] In Africa, the implementation of global programmes for least developed countries, small island developing States and South-South cooperation are led by UNDP and UNIDO; the Joint WTO-UNIDO Cotton Initiative for African Countries is supported by FAO, UNCTAD, ISO and other partners.

ESCAP inter-agency cooperation deals with disaster response and preparedness, concerns on HIV/AIDS, environmental protection, violence against women (including human trafficking), accession to WTO and statistical upgrading for MDG reporting.

In the Gulf region, a 2004 technical cooperation round table among countries in the region and 17 United Nations agencies identified common challenges for intercountry cooperation.

In Europe, ECE Environmental Conventions capacity-building activities support intercountry exchanges as an important modality. ECE collaborates with UNDP and UNEP in the Environmental Security Initiative (see also A.c.2, above).

The Tokyo International Conference on African Development Exchange, implemented by UNDP, supports information networking between Asia and Africa with UNIDO technical support; in the Mediterranean region, the Mediterranean Exchange is supported by UNIDO.

Cooperation among United Nations organizations with the regional commissions could be enhanced by a more systematic planned approach.

• To promote indigenous knowledge, know-how and technology in the South and facilitate networking among experts and institutions in developing countries (para. 80)
• To celebrate the United Nations Day for South-South Cooperation in a benefiting and comprehensive manner every year (para. 81) | • Need to define initiatives to mobilize additional resources for enhancing South-South cooperation, including through triangular cooperation (para. 82)

• Organizations of the United Nations system should further strengthen efforts and support for national capacity development in the context of South-South cooperation to enhance development effectiveness (para. 85) [I.4]

[I.1] Most United Nations organizations have focal points to promote and support TCDC/SSC in agency programmes but uniform information is lacking for system-wide overview.

With different focus for Africa, Asia and the Pacific and Latin America, UNDP country offices actively support SSC in HIV/AIDS, democratic governance, crisis prevention and recovery, energy and the environment.

UNFPA supports SSC mostly at subregional level for integrated reproductive health services and obstetric fistula.

In addition to the Cotton Initiative for Africa and the TICAD Exchange, UNIDO and the African Regional Centre for Technology promote South-South technology transfer. UNIDO’s Cleaner Production Programme works through a network of centres covering 30 countries.

UNCTAD supports South-South economic and commercial relations, in creative industries, ICT, and tourism, among others. ITC South-South trade promotion programme brings buyers and sellers together.

Some programmes support SSC globally (FAO’s Special Programme for Food Security deploying 600 SSC experts in 34 countries; WHO Disease Surveillance Networks; UNAIDS support to the International Partnership against AIDS; and most UNU activities); others support SSC regionally (ICAO and UNESCO). UNEP is strengthening its efforts to promote SSC within the framework of the Bali Strategic Plan.

[I.2] Best practices in South-South cooperation are documented in the SU/SSC publication Sharing Innovative Experiences posted on its website.

[I.3] SSC activities of FAO, UNIDO, the Pan American Health Organization, and ESCAP are linked to the SU/SSC website; United Nations development agencies should establish such links systematically.

[I.4] SSC cooperation is one of the six “drivers of development effectiveness” in the UNDP Multi-Year Funding Framework (MYFF). However, SSC is not a focus of the UNDG work programme for capacity development.

Main expected results and time frames of Task Force on Gender Equality (Chair UNIFEM) are: gender strategies and accountability, harmonized performance indicators, improved tools and coordination mechanisms for gender mainstreaming in common country programming — April 2006; training modules developed on gender as part of common CCA/UNDAF training — June/July 2006; database of United Nations gender experts to support UNCTs — June 2006; recommendations for strengthening guidelines for RC annual reporting — February 2006.

Out of 134 resident coordinators’ annual reports for 2004 reviewed, in 43 instances reports highlighted substantive areas of joint initiatives on gender equality; 13 joint programmes in gender are posted in UNDGO database; a best practice note on gender mainstreaming was issued in September 2005 for UNCTs use.

[K.a.1] UNCTs in some post-conflict countries developed appeals for transition and assisted in preparing transitional plans based on nationally led needs assessment, strategically linking humanitarian and development priorities.

UNCTs, in some countries, support government coordination with the Development Assistance Database to consolidate information for planning and tracking overall support to transition. Harmonizing data collection and information management systems during the transition is under way between OCHA, UNDG and UNICEF, linking the Humanitarian Information Centre, the Development Assistance Database and DevInfo.

To build local capacity during the relief phase, agencies (e.g., FAO, UNHCR, WHO and WFP) partner with national authorities and organizations, build vulnerable groups skills, adopt policies to systematically implement capacity-building. Significant existing and potential local capacity was often untapped during the emergencies of 2005, thus the United Nations Emergency Relief Coordinator is working with Governments and agencies to improve the situation.

[K.a.2] In Asia-Pacific, South-South cooperation modalities supported post-tsunami humanitarian relief. UNDP developed a roster of experts for conflict prevention and recovery while UNDGO has a roster of strategic planners and coordination advisers for transition and post-conflict needs assessment. In 2005, WFP launched the Latin American and Caribbean Emergency Response Network to facilitate exchange of knowledge in the region to improve quality of emergency response.

[K.a.3] UNDP Country Directors were appointed in 13 countries in transition (another 11 will follow). UNDGO fielded Senior Coordination Advisers and strategic planners to enhance the capacity of RC Offices in countries in transition, resulting in the creation of a number of co-located, co-financed Coordination Units for humanitarian, transition and development coordination. A UNDG Special Task Force recommended for consideration by UNDG Executive Committee, among others, raising the profile of strategic personnel to strengthen support to UNCTs in emergency and transitional situations.

UNDP/OCHA and UNDGO will develop a Joint Programme for Coordination in Transition providing RC/HC and UNCTs with coordination support during transition from emergency to development at the country and Headquarters levels.
